

Take as You Need

Many students' families experience economic hardships. It's hard to be a successful student if you can't afford supplies, so lend a hand to bridge that gap!

First: Stock the restrooms with hygienic supplies for students to take what they need. This could include travel-sized deodorants, hand sanitizers, and lotion. Individual teachers could do this within their own classroom as well.

Second: In the office, create a basket of spare school supplies like paper, pencils, markers, folders, and snacks. Individual teachers could do this within their own classes as well.

Third: While some students may abuse this, remember that some students are being sincerely aided by it! To restock, you could reach out to the community for donations or apply to Random Acts for a grant!

Fourth: Create a discreet way for people to communicate that they are experiencing some type of financial need. This could be for students themselves to reach out for help or for families to reach out help.
